

Urgent Call for Unity
Summer 2013
Edited by Marshall Steinbaum
Packet by Will Alston and Kirk Jing

1. The Mohica-Cummings lawsuit occurred in this state after an applicant to one school was unable to document his ancestry. Another lawsuit concerning the same school concluded that its racially discriminatory admissions practices were acceptable for remedial purposes and was presided over by Judge Alan Cooke Kay. The 1993 (*) Apology Resolution concerned events in this state. The Prepaid Healthcare Act, passed in 1974 in this state, requires employers to offer insurance to employees who work more than 20 hours per week; this state thus has the second-highest insured rate after Massachusetts. A series of populist rebellions led by Robert Wilcox in this state threatened the Bayonet Constitution that enabled the regime of Sanford Dole. For 10 points, the aim of those uprisings was to restore autonomous rule by placing Queen Lili'uokalani on the throne of what state?

ANSWER: Hawaii

2. A ruler of this region was forced into exile with his mother, Anna of Byzantium, and renounced his claim to this region in favor of his uncle, though he would later reclaim it for himself. That man, Daniel of [this region], was the first to be crowned under Papal authority as the King of Rus'. A peasant uprising near Tarnow in 1846 is known as this region's "slaughter." The notorious Baptism of the Frankists occurred in this region in 1759 with Augustus III acting as godfather, and the Jews native to this region, which is located south of the Gefilte Fish Line, were proverbially backward. Thousands of peasants emigrated from this region during the "Brazilian fever" of 1895-97, and a work by Stanislaw Szczepanowski discusses this region's proverbial (*) "misery;" along with Lodomeria this region named the poorest province in the Austrian Empire, which gained control of this region in the First Partition of Poland. For 10 points name this historical battleground of a region in Western Ukraine and Southern Poland, which shares its English name with a region in northwestern Spain.

ANSWER: Galicia (or Halychyna; or Halici; or Galicia; or Kaliz; or similar sounding stuff)

3. The earliest known examples of these items are from burials of the Andronovo Culture. Examples of these from the Nordic Bronze Age include one named for Trundholm, and these items are also shown on petroglyphs found at the King's Grave double burial in Skåne. Chinese invention of these items is traditionally attributed to Xi Zhong, though they were in fact introduced to China by Indo-European migrants. Other Indo-European groups introduced these items to India, where they were known as ratha. A ceremonial one of these items with (*) bronze plates depicting Achilles' receiving armor from his mother was unearthed in an Etruscan burial chamber dated to 530 BC. The first Hittite use of these may be attested in the Anitta text, which describes the siege of Salatiwara. The armies of Muwatalli II and Ramesses II both contained hundreds of these items. For 10 points, name these horse-drawn vehicles used at the Battle of Kadesh.

ANSWER: chariots

4. This man chaired the arbitration committee for the so-called “Bread and Roses” strike and oversaw a settlement favorable to the largely female IWW contingent, but this man also dismissed “the right to strike against public safety anytime, anywhere” in a telegram to Samuel Gompers and supported Edwin Curtis in refusing to re-hire striking policemen, precipitating his rise to (*) national office. This man disagreed with the Secretary of Agriculture and feuded with his Vice President over the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Act, which he vetoed. Longstanding opposition to federal benefits for US Army veterans contributed to this man’s support for outlawing war with the Kellogg-Briand pact. For 10 points, name this president who said “the chief business of the American people is business” and succeeded after Warren Harding’s death.

ANSWER: Calvin Coolidge

5. This political party introduced a single transferable vote system for Senate elections in 1948 in an attempt to retain control of the chamber after its expected 1949 electoral loss, but this party lost its outright Senate majority in 1951 and has never regained it. This party’s platform was described as “the light on the hill” by Ben Chifley. This party expelled B.A. Santamaria and his anti-Communist Catholic supporters following the (*) Petrov Affair, after that faction questioned H.V. Evatt’s defense of supposed Soviet agents on his staff; that split locked this party out of government until 1972. In an attempt to ram through a solution to the funding crisis brought about by the Coalition’s Senate intransigence, Sir John Kerr dismissed the subsequent Prime Minister from this party, Gough Whitlam, in Australia’s version of the King-Byng Affair. For 10 points, name this political party currently led by Kevin Rudd after he ousted Julia Gillard.

ANSWER: Australian Labour Party (accept “ALP” and word forms: Labour Party of Australia)

6. Financial backers of this man’s expedition included prominent Whigs like the colonial governor Lord Bellomont, who eventually lured this man into captivity in order to cover his own prior collaboration. This man was convicted of murdering William Moore by throwing a bucket at his head, which apparently happened after his refusal to attack a Dutch merchantman was met with consternation by a desperate crew. This man returned to the Caribbean after most of his men defected to the owner of the Mocha Frigate, Robert Culliford. Passes from the French East India Company for the (*) Quedagh Merchant were withheld at this man’s trial, defeating his defense as a lawful privateer, and this man attempted to gain bargaining power by burying some of his loot on Gardiner’s Island. For 10 points, name this unfortunate New York privateer and convicted pirate who supposedly buried his treasure on Long Island.

ANSWER: Captain William Kidd

7. The primary region in which these people live was afflicted by a series of blood feuds known as the War of the Bands in the 14th and 15th centuries. The Banu Qasi or “heirs of Cassius” were a Muslim dynasty of these people; its founder became a mawali, supposedly after journeying to Damascus to pay homage in person to Al Walid I. A descendant of theirs, the lord of Tudela Musa ibn Musa allied with his stepbrother Eneko Arista to defeat a military expedition in 824 led by Count Aeblus of (*) Gascony. In an argument since considered questionable, Wilhelm von Humboldt argued that groups related to these people were once spread over a wider area in Europe. The nationalist political party associated with these people is known as the PNV or EAJ; persecution of that political party led to the rise of the terrorist group which was initially blamed for the 2005 Atocha bombing. For 10 points name, these people with a namesake region in northern Spain, some of whom seek “Askatasuna” as part of ETA.

ANSWER: Basques (or Vascos; extra props for people who say Euskaldunak or Euskal Herriararak/Euskotarrak)

8. This political party implemented the land reform recommended by the Joint Commission on Rural Reconstruction. Parliamentary seats reserved for indigenous peoples are often referred to as “iron votes” for this party. The only president not from this party was sentenced to life in jail after his term expired; he won thanks to this party’s vote-splitting with the People’s First Party, which is currently a junior partner in the (*) Pan-Blue Coalition. After the Flight 334 hijacking, it abandoned the Three Noes policy. The “White Terror” followed this party’s promulgation the “Temporary Provisions Effective During the Period of Communist Rebellion,” establishing one-party martial law in the aftermath of the 2-28 Incident; those provisions remained in effect for 40 years. For 10 points, name this ruling party of the Republic of China, AKA the Independent Country of Taiwan, which was led into exile by Chiang Kai-Shek.

ANSWER: Kuomintang (or Guómíndǎng; accept KMT, GMD or Chinese Nationalist Party)

9. A series of documents of this type were produced in response to the tenth question of a 1577 questionnaire from Philip II, and a genealogy that establishes a dynastic history of the Mixtecs and accompanies one of those responses is named for the town of San Pedro Teozacoalco. The earliest surviving document of this type, the so-called Turin Papyrus, was created by the Scribe-of-the-Tomb Ammen-akhte for Ramesses IV and has been shown to be lithologically accurate. One man whose profession was creating this type of document wrote that his friend Peter Bruegel “painted many things which cannot be painted,” and that same man, (*) Abraham Ortelius, also wrote “the vestiges of the rupture reveal themselves, if someone brings forward [one of these documents] and considers carefully the coasts of the three [continents],” the first recorded conjecture of continental drift. For 10 points, what is this type of document collected in Ortelius’ Theatrum Orbis Terrarum, an example of which is one named for Martin Waldseemüller which introduced the term “America.”

ANSWER: maps (accept atlas)

10. One leader from this modern country, Lembitu of Lebola, hailed from Sakala county and was killed on the Battle of St. Matthew's Day. A "Great Famine" in this country from 1695-97 killed approximately 20% of its population. An early group living in this modern country worshipped the deity Tharapita and carried out a raid on Sigtuna in 1187. That group was the Oeselians, who lived on this country's island of Saaremaa. The Njals Saga calls the capital of this modern country (*) Rafala, and that same city was known as Reval during the Nazi occupation and while it was a member of the Hanseatic League. Sweden gained control of this country in 1561 after the Livonian War and retained it as a duchy until the end of a war in which several battles were fought at this country's city of Narva, the Great Northern War. For 10 points, name this austerity-loving European country whose current President, Toomas Henrik Ilves, engaged in an ill-considered, overblown 2012 Twitter feud with Paul Krugman.
