

The Danny Amendola Memorial Trash Packet

Tossups by Mike Cheyne

1. Gary Bauer said this man was “anti-family” after he dived into a mosh pit accompanied by music from Rage Against the Machine for a segment of Michael Moore’s show The Awful Truth. This man hosted a MSNBC show whose title said he was “making sense.” His daughter, Maya, is a lesbian. A picture of this man pointing appears in a meme saying people are “postin’ in a troll thread” and he was drafted for a Senate election after Jack Ryan withdrew due to his sex scandal. For 10 points, name this black conservative who lost the 2004 Illinois Senate election to Barack Obama.

ANSWER: Alan Keyes

2. At the end of this movie, the protagonist writes a book with physicist Dr. Alex Friedman. An antagonist in this film is an assassin known as the “Siphon.” The title location is a secret California government base. Its best known scene is when the main character, a cab driver, reacts with surprise when characters played by Alexander Ludwig and AnnaSophia Robb suddenly appear in his taxi. The protagonist of this film is played by Dwayne Johnson, who picks up two alien teenagers. For 10 points, name this 2009 film, basically a remake of Escape to Witch Mountain.

ANSWER: Race to Witch Mountain

3. This piece of music plays in a video showing a head from Team Fortress 2 floating in space with a frying pan on it. It plays in a location where a character obtains the “Green Cheese of Longevity” by defeating a menacing rat. This music played during the YouTube video “This is What I see With My Eyes Closed.” For 10 points, name this piece of music that appears in a NES game starring Scrooge McDuck, specifically in a level set on a lunar object.

ANSWER: “DuckTales Moon Theme”

4. This action is performed by a man in the Auburn weight room with the caption “Every day I am” doing it. This activity was exposed with a tweet reading “Haha I don’t know what to say” by Keegan Bradley. It was first memorably done at the Salesmanship Youth and Family Center in Dallas by a man wearing a red shirt. For 10 points, name this action where someone sits in a slumped, expressionless position, most memorably done by the 2013 PGA Championship winner.

ANSWER: Dufnering

5. After this song says the same word twelve times to open it, the singer notes that “sunshine’s down, so come to town” and the chorus states “everybody, summertime love, you’ll remember me.” In the music video, the singer is swimming in a pool with her bikini top continually sliding down to reveal her nipples. This song plays while Michelle Jenneke jumps up and down and shimmies her legs shortly before running the hurdles in a YouTube video. For 10 points, name this Sabrina Salerno song addressed to the title young men.

ANSWER: “Boys (Summertime Love)” [accept “Boys, Boys, Boys”]

6. The owner of this object says “think before you speak” when someone points out he actually bought it at a convenience store. It is described as “a honor they bestow on just one guy a month” by its owner while he squints his eyes. First appearing in the episode “Stop! Pajama Time,” it supposedly is given to the best salesperson of the month. For 10 points, name this object worn by Adam on Workaholics which ostensibly has no connection to a Tom Cruise movie about jet planes.

ANSWER: Top Gun hat

7. This work is denounced for its trait of having “characters announce how they feel,” which makes one observer feel angry. It begins with the title character referred to as a “female baby Moses” and an antagonist sings “I’m stupider than you in every way.” After the staging of this work, its writer is told “your music is bad and you should feel bad.” A character in this work wishes to be skilled at the holophonor, causing him to make a deal with the Robot Devil. For 10 points, name this opera written by Fry in the Futurama episode “The Devil’s Hands Are Idle Playthings.”

ANSWER: Leela: Orphan of the Stars

8. A commercial for this company notes that a pizza costs ten dollars and so for three pizzas, you can buy one of this company’s products. In another of its commercials, a video of someone dancing is shown while a speaker says “you’re the purveyor of, you’re the generator of, you’re the author of...GREAT STUFF.” That commercial begins with its star saying “the greatest gift of the holidays is...Internet.” It produced advertisements that are slowed down to create the “Drunk Jeff Goldblum” videos. For 10 points, name this company that produces the iMac.

ANSWER: Apple

9. First name acceptable. This person’s mother, Caroline McClure, had ancestors who fought at Yorktown. She planned to attend Agnes Scott College but was turned off by the sexuality she saw. Croatian expatriate Jelena Lecic’s photo represented this person. While this person was supposedly last seen being placed in a car with a window sticker of Basel Assad, it was later revealed she never existed and was made up by American Tom MacMaster. For 10 points, name this fictional woman who supposedly wrote the blog A Gay Girl in Damascus.

ANSWER: Amina Abdallah Arraf al Omari

10. This character’s “appalling hair” supposedly makes another character’s “gorge rise.” He tells the protagonist not to drool on his shirt when he unveils his “amazing superweapon.” His hilarious theme song features numerous tuba sections. He creates a railed weapon with a catapult that is used to stun The Imprisoned. This character has such bully friends as Cawlin and Strich and he steals the hero’s Crimson Loftwing. For 10 points, name this doofish classmate of Link’s in Skyward Sword.

ANSWER: Groose

11. In the books, this character is blamed by Dr. Danco for that man’s torture by guerrillas in El Salvador; Danco ends up removing this man’s feet, hands, and tongue. This character is killed when Lila Tournay blows up Santos Jimenez’s cabin, and he is the former lover of Maria LaGuerta. When tailing the protagonist in the episode “Born Free,” he memorably says “Surprise, motherfucker!” For 10 points, name this detective sergeant who discovered that his nemesis, Dexter, was the Bay Harbor Butcher.

ANSWER: James Doakes [or Albert]

12. It has nothing to do with the photos themselves, but Pope Benedict XVI’s photo album was mocked for this trait, as was a July 4th, 2012 CERN presentation on the discovery of the Higgs Boson. This was the most hilarious trait of a document in which the author personally guarantees that his team will win a NBA championship “before the self-titled former ‘king’ wins one.” Dan Gilbert’s anti-LeBron James letter was mocked for being written in this manner. For 10 points, name this trait involving ostensibly serious documents written in a childish looking font.

ANSWER: using Comic Sans font

13. At one point during this event, John Harwood incredulously asks “Seriously?” During it, a man on the right says “five” while holding up his hand in front of the speaker. It ends with the speaker embarrassingly saying “oops,” even though he almost succeeds in using Mitt Romney’s suggestion of “E.P.A” to join the Departments of Commerce and Education. For 10 points, name this incident in a 2011 Republican debate when a Governor of Texas could not remember the Department of Education.

ANSWER: Rick Perry not remembering the third government agency

14. While defending female breadwinners and gay parents, this reporter misread the word “emo” as “eco,” leading to her saying the phrase “eco-liberal.” During the 2012 election night coverage, she asked Karl Rove if his projections were “just math that you do as a Republican to make yourself feel better?” Jon Stewart noted her recent aggressive defense of maternity leave, although she may still be best known for telling Bill O’Reilly that pepper spray is essentially a food. For 10 points, name this blonde Fox News reporter, the former host of America Live.

ANSWER: Megyn Kelly

15. In a scene in this film, the protagonist is riding in a car where he notes work doesn’t just “gooooo away” before screaming about a “goddamn contract in the goddamn fucking files.” At the end of it, the main character is murdered by the brother of his abused secretary, Alva. The image of the protagonist ranting about a “terrible job” appears in the “You don’t say?” Internet meme. In one scene in this film, the protagonist rants about misfiled documents to his therapist by reciting the alphabet. The protagonist purchases a pair of cheap fangs after being bitten by a woman played by Jennifer Beals. For 10 points, name this movie in which Nicolas Cage plays a lunatic who thinks he has become a bloodsucker.

ANSWER: Vampire’s Kiss

16. After appearing in Action Comics #14, this man notes he wouldn’t have helped Aquaman in the same way. He wrote “The horror, the horror,” an essay on his website about viewing the 9/11 attacks first-hand. In one interview, he notes many people are “slogging through calculus” despite it being invented by someone before his 26th birthday. An image of this man features him raising his hands with the caption “watch out guys, we’re dealing with a badass over here.” For 10 points, name this astrophysicist beloved by Facebook posters who profess to love science.

ANSWER: Neil deGrasse Tyson

17. At the beginning of this episode, the death of Leslie Wong is reported and the protagonist muses he’s come to hate Fridays. It ends with the main character erasing his log entry after noting the most damning thing of all is that he can “live with it.” The protagonist says his father told him “the road to hell is paved with good intentions.” In its best known scene, Ambassador Vreenak shouts “It’s a faaaaaake!” before being killed by Garak. For 10 points, name this Deep Space Nine episode in which Sisko uses extreme measures to get the Romulans to join the Dominion War.

ANSWER: “In the Pale Moonlight”

18. This person’s catch phrases include “poop on your toothpaste” and he pronounces Tom Clancy as “Tom Cuh-lancy.” He is best known for obnoxiously waving his hands while using the phrase “doodly doodly doop” to reference going back in time to show what particular game franchises would look like in the past. For 10 points, name this annoying entertainer who hosted Ubisoft’s press conference at E3 in 2011.

ANSWER: Mr. Caffeine [or Aaron Priceman]

19. General description okay. This location is described immediately after a speech about parents coming on the weekends to do laundry. The speaker says “don’t take this offensively” while noting that people in this place are probably “checking on everybody from the tsunami thing.” In describing conversations in this location, a woman used the expression “Ching chong ting tong ling long.” Alexandra Wallace infamously complained about Asian students using cell phones in this location. For 10 points, name this location where undergraduate Bruins would go to get books.

ANSWER: UCLA Library [or Powell Library]

20. Shortly after saying this four word phrase, the speaker takes out a countdown clock and notes at the end of the countdown, another man will be caught with some “rent boy” from South America. The speaker says a similar phrase after noting his opponent apologized for his “poor choice in words.” This phrase is said to Arkansas school board member Clint McCance after he said he liked when gay kids died of AIDS. For 10 points, name this four word phrase said by George Takei to a homophobic dude in a YouTube video.

ANSWER: “You are a douchebag” [accept “that’s right—a douchebag”]

21. If this character dies, he says “what need for the shepherd when the wolves have all gone.” An illusion of him fights Jonathan Morris in a training mission and earlier he is brainwashed by the wizard Shaft. He shouts “Die, monster! You don’t belong in this world!” to a villain who tells him that man is “a miserable little pile of secrets.” For 10 points, name this descendent of Simon who is mesmerized into reviving Dracula in Castlevania: Symphony of the Night.

ANSWER: Richter Belmont [prompt on Belmont]

22. For almost twenty years, this position was held on alternating basis by Frank Clement and Buford Ellington. The first man to die while holding this office signed the Butler Act and was named Austin Peay. In 2010, a candidate for this position, Basil Marceaux, produced an ad saying "VOTE FOR ME AND IF I WIN I WILL IMMUNE YOU FROM ALL STATE CRIMES." It was the non-Texas governorship held by Sam Houston and also held by presidents like James Polk and Andrew Johnson. For 10 points, name this position held by Bill Haslem, which runs a state with cities such as Nashville.

ANSWER: Governor of Tennessee

23. Hannah Clarke created a documentary about this character. Slash fiction gives him the name of "Melpomaen" and in an in-joke, the actor who played him was also cast in the role of "Lindir." This character's only dialogue is in telling Arwen not to delay. His name was coined by Iris Hadad, with the first three letters standing for "Frodo is great..." For 10 points, give this fan-created name for the Bret McKenzie played elf in the Lord of the Rings films.

ANSWER: Figwit

24. This actor played Derek Bowman, who leads the summer camp for CIA agents at the end of Agent Cody Banks 2. He played the title role, a selfish businessman that is the target for various kidnappings in the film King's Ransom. In one of his roles, his character stops talking to Pentagon analyst Maggie Madsen to scream "Shut up, grandma!" and "Drink your prune juice!" For 10 points, name this actor who played hacker Glen Whitmann in Transformers, the sidekick in Kangaroo Jack, and Detective "Saint" Bernard on Law and Order.

ANSWER: Anthony Anderson

25. A famous example of this action occurring was performed by super featherweight boxer Rocky Lockridge. In a SNL sketch featuring this action, it is performed by the Jon Hamm played Mark Sharon on the show "I Didn't Ask for This," during which it is auto-tuned and laughed at by the other participants on the show. Its best known Internet example comes after a man's son says "somewhere, deep down in my heart...I still love you." For 10 points, name this action in a bizarre, high-pitched manner by an emotional man on an episode of Intervention.

ANSWER: crying

26. This actor played the mentor of the title superhero on the short-lived TV series "The Cape." Aside from the Kurt Russell character, this man's character is the only one to survive the film The Thing. A meme about one of his character's propensity for giving orders is "Ramirez! Do everything!" This man's deep voice can be heard narrating commercials for UPS, the U.S. Navy, and in the role of Sgt. Foley in Call of Duty. For 10 points, name this actor known for his voice roles, such as Goliath on Gargoyles.

ANSWER: Keith David

27. One of the villainous Fracktail's seemingly nonsensical comments references this character from another video game series. This character resembles a resident of Saria named Bagu who gives a note to deliver to the "river man." He lives in the town of Ruto and advises the protagonist on taking a hidden tunnel south of Kings Tomb to the Island Palace. For 10 points, name this villager with an amusing name once thought to be a programming bug in The Adventure of Link.

ANSWER: Error

28. A July 2013 tweet explained vandalism in Oakland as confusion about this non-killer's identity. This man nominated Deepak Chopra to his board of directors but in 2013, was dismissed by a company that noted he "wouldn't accept anything other than full control." He is best known for his catch phrase "You're going to like the way you look—I guarantee it." For 10 points, name this founder and recently ousted chief executive of Men's Wearhouse, whose name is similar to the killer of Trayvon Martin's.

ANSWER: George Zimmer

29. In one appearance, this character demands that Milli Vanilli be kidnapped for her pleasure. She calls herself the "almost-empress of the entire real world" in the episode "Reptiles in the Rose Garden." In the games, this character is the boss of Water Land and Chocolate Island and shoots candy rings at the protagonist. She annoyingly refers to the main villain of the show she appeared on as "daddykins" or "King Dad." For 10 points, name this only daughter of Bowser in the Super Mario series.

ANSWER: Wendy O. Koopa [or Kootie Pie]

30. At one point, this character performs an experiment on his brother Mike, his fiancée Sharon, and a pizza delivery man named Jack. He was briefly known as Veridium and during 52, he is brought to Oolong Island to work on Plutonium Man. In a famous panel, he is asked if a string of numbers is a Swiss bank account but responds by saying "It's machine code." He is lusted after by Tina the Platinum Girl and commands a group including Gold and Mercury. For 10 points, name this creator of the Metal Men.

ANSWER: Will Magnus

31. This product was created by Dan Morris and Sumit Basu, who also appeared in the first ad for it. In a commercial for this product, a man says "our towels rock" while sitting at a coffee shop trying to create an advertising pitch. A reviled advertisement for this product begins with the note it is "rated S" and "is intended for anyone who has ever sung in the shower." That ad features a father being told by his daughter that you "sing into the microphone and the drummer follows along." For 10 points, name this Microsoft application which generates a musical accompaniment after a voice is recorded.

ANSWER: Songsmith

32. A sequel to this work was mocked for featuring dancing Klingons and dancing black prisoners apparently threatening someone with broomstick rape. This work ends with Corey deciding to use his money from his summer job to make a purchase, and it begins with him playing with Jenny. It features various creators of Neverwinter Nights talking to the viewers. This video features M.E. Hart as "MC Double Def DP," who advises kids about the ethics of video game downloading. For 10 points, name this anti-copyright infringement video with a rhyming name.

ANSWER: Don't Copy that Floppy

33. This three word phrase is referenced in the Big Bang Theory episode “The Spaghetti Catalyst” when Sheldon has a nightmare. It first appeared in the webcomic The Parking Lot is Full with a caption saying the person hearing it would dynamite a location to rubble and is now in prison. This phrase is spoken by a figure holding a doorknob with one hand and a belt with the other, as his son screams “No, dad! No!” A caption below this phrase notes the boy eventually destroyed Disneyland. For 10 points, name this three word phrase said by a menacing Disney character in a popular Internet meme.

ANSWER: “It’s Goofy Time!”

34. In this character’s second appearance, he chases Professor Jones around on “The Island of Dr. Mystico.” In his first appearance, he captures the protagonist, who then references and shows live action footage of the show F-Troop. He wears a burlap sack over his head and is said to be the boogeyman, and his first appearance featured him capturing kids at a campground when they told stories about him. For 10 points, name this villain from Freakazoid, best known for appearing and tying up people whenever they say his name.

ANSWER: Candle Jack

35. A man involved in this event said his son Blake helped him prepare and that afterwards his wife said at least he didn’t use the word “beautiful.” That man said he didn’t ask for an autograph after this event because he has only asked Joe Namath for an autograph. It begins with a man saying that he is most excited about “nothing” in regards to his latest project. This event happened to promote the release of a new LP, and near the end, the questioner discusses the point spread in a Detroit Lions game, followed by the interviewer being told he is on a “fantasy announcer team.” For 10 points, name this incident during the Michigan/Notre Dame football game where Brent Musberger interviewed a Detroit area rapper.

ANSWER: The Eminem interview

36. This character doesn’t really have a name. This character may be inspired by D’Arcy Boulton, former head of the Midland Railway of Canada. He was originally created to advertise either dentures or photographic aides. His first appearance featured him selling “Forbes’ Insoluble Dry Plates.” In all of his appearances, he is grinning, wearing a tri-cornered hat, and sporting a monocle. For 10 points, name this old timey figure who laughs “Ha! Ha!” and says phrases like “I’m Using the Internet” in various memes.

ANSWER: Ha Ha Quaker Guy

37. At the end of this episode, a character reveals that “Golden Boy” has been replaced by “Baby Blue.” Another character uses an analogy of “an old man trying to send soup back to the deli.” A Russian author throws a beeping organizer out of the window shortly after being told the original title for a book was War, What is it Good For? Its most famous punchline is a character showing the harmful effects of hitting golf balls into the sea. For 10 points, name this Seinfeld episode in which George saves a whale while posing as the title scientist.

ANSWER: “The Marine Biologist”

38. A fictionalization of this event explained its perpetrator was wearing a “lucky burlap unitard” and had eaten a bag of roasted peanuts beforehand. In that fictionalization, its perpetrator repeats his action because of a “cinnamon challenge.” It really occurred while a man was delivering a sentence about being frustrated at the president’s “false choices.” For 10 points, name this incident during a Republican rebuttal to President Obama’s State of the Union address in 2013 where a Florida politician seemed to become dehydrated.

ANSWER: Marco Rubio reaching for water

39. In one of my earlier posts, I noted the Halloween party on a Sabrina episode was really an analogy for this activity. Dan Passner noted a weird example of this activity was “Travels with Charley: Part 245.” After someone mentioned this activity, he was told to “go away” by Jeff Geringer. Tom Soderholm said quizbowl was at its heart this activity, after which he apologized to the “limited female following.” For 10 points, name this sexual practice described as what goes on on an Illinois quizbowl thread by Matt Bollinger.

ANSWER: circle jerking

40. It’s not a shark, but a man with a hook scrapes a window while people discuss this creature, only to announce he has to use the restroom. It eats a pineapple belonging to the protagonist. This creature says “ow” after it falls off a cliff shortly after a battle in which Sandy defeats its tongue. It ends up destroying a location that Patrick had suggested to just “push” somewhere else, a scene that inspired a popular meme. For 10 points, name this large pink creature which threatens to consume Bikini Bottom in the Spongebob episode “Sandy, SpongeBob, and the Worm.”

ANSWER: Alaskan Bullworm